Formal complaint - GG member ‘Gabz_is_shite’

Authors: collated by multiple frequenters of the Dan and Phil sub-threads, that do not wish to be identified.

- Issue 1: reasonable suspicion that Gabz_is_shite has operated multiple accounts in order to agree with herself; this is against GG rules. (Rule 1.i)
- Issue 2: deleting of posts disagreeing with her on a moral level regarding gossip outing a closeted same-sex couple; this is not against GG rules and thus the deleting is unwarranted.
- Issue 3: claiming insider information and thus confirming the sexuality status of people whom have not confirmed it publicly, violating GG Rule 1.f (“Refrain from posting any personal information (e.g. last names and addresses) that YouTuber/Blogger/Personality has not released themselves.”) Furthermore, it is information that has real-world potential legal ramifications (libel, slander); but more importantly the potential to harm or endanger the person(s) being gossiped about, as the identity status is one known to suffer from discrimination and violent harassment.

Evidence is as follows. Issues 2 & 3 begin on page 8.

I thought it was high time I joined this forum, it's something I've been thinking of doing for a while. Recent events have made me want to step out of the shadows and wade right in to the murky waters. Wow, so much happens here! In just one day you've covered Lav's all-encompasing insight into the psyche of a man she's never met, undertaken handwriting and drawing analysis from THE video, given me a very shocking insight into what possibly happened sexually, Gabz went from being some people's favourite poster to being called rude and told to pipe down, people showed the same passion for music as Dan did (I think some of you could be good friends with him), we've learnt that Jim Chapman is paying for his wedding with pizza money, and you guys have been hilarious about the liveshow and Phil's video. You make lurking hard because you're having too much fun.

Hi

Seeing as other people are coming out of lurking today I thought I would too. I actually wanted to say to Gabz I'm so glad you came back! When you said you were leaving I was gutted! You have really changed the way I see Dan and Phil, and I know a lot of people in the phandom feel the same way. I still love them, a bit too much, but now I accept they do this for their job and have managers. I think many of us were naive about it all. It actually helps with things like the book and tour because it made me see they weren't becoming like other youtubers or doing something bad, it's just another part of their job. You said that you were talking to some people from here on private message and I was a bit gutted about that as I love to hear behind the scenes things. Do you mind if I message you because I have lots of questions? Don't worry if it's a no because I'm too new, I'll understand. Hi to everyone else too! I love your posts.

This made me laugh a lot! Bit rude felucca Sorry I started that Gabz with my comment. Loved the John Barrowman story and everything else I've discovered today. This thread is the best!

Don't worry HelloWand (nice anagram btw!) I'mmmmm tooooo busy blocking out the haterz! Margot and Felucca

I thought that was odd as usually talks very well and sticks up for people. Maybe he didn't really believe all the anonymous videos coming out, or was waiting until an actual arrest happened or something?

I vaguely know which bit you mean but I can't remember what Dan said exactly. But his BBC media training would include making sure he doesn't have anything on record stating his feelings about controversies that are only alleged. Him and Phil are probably more used to having sensible reactions to things than other YTers do because of this training, which they'd have to have each year at BBC. Now Jack and Dean have an ongoing contract with BBC they'll also have to have the training, and maybe it will help them stop being impetuous dickheads online. I remember Jack tweeted Jason after he admitted rape, and said well done for being honest, I respect you. Yuck!

Do any of you archiving types collect funny comments from YT videos? My fave one (can't remember which video it was under) was from a young guy in the far east who said "but Dan is girl right?" I looked at his other comments and I'm pretty sure he wasn't a troll - just a sweet, confused viewer.

Ahhh Wand, bless you! Did you know there's a D&P thread to chat to everyone about general off topic stuff? Not that this is off topic, but if you want to get to know the others I meant. I'm not going to any of the shows, I just thought I would cringe too much. I'll wait until the DVD comes out, though I'm sure it will be just like watching them at vidcon or something doing games. I'm going to their book launch party though, but probably won't have the chance to meet them.

Oh my goodness, I don't think I've laughed so much on a Monday morning in ages especially whilst hungover. That stuff about me a few pages back is hilarious, and this time not a shock as I read my PMs first. Thanks everyone who PMed, you are SO bloody funny, and have made me cry-laugh, especially the one who likened it all to the Wizard of Oz - you know who you are, and you're spot on, lol! I hope you come back from Dan's face DansDimple (and pick up the mic on your way in heh heh), don't let 'em get you down, and don't worry about newbies - they're the ones PMing with questions all the time (and I don't mind a jot).

Did Phil say why he didn't do his liveshow? I was hoping to watch that whilst pretending to work this morning. Also, yes - the Weakest Link would be amazing. Does anyone have a rough idea what year he was on it?

p.s thanks Phantastico for the videos! That will also be nice this morning!

It's definitely the only thread that's not as much fun to join as you think it's going to be. Because of things like this.

I've thought about this too, and I wonder if Dan and Phil have any campaigns they've done and regretted later? Dan mentioned Krave in his liveshow this week so he seems to be cool with that one lol

Click here for web version of tweet.

I didn't even look, lol! I wonder if he or Dan will do a tribute to Satoru Iwata on their gaming channel? I know there was a bit of beef with Nintendo and YTers.... Found a website with all the Weakest Link episodes but can't be arsed to look at EVERY SINGLE ONE! A general date would be a help.

I'm probably too new here to have an opinion about this, but I'm going to stick my neck out and say it. I think some people here treat Gabz very unkindly just because they don't believe her. I really feel that if you take that stance you should just ignore her posts, there's no need to be unkind and try to make her feel bad. She shares a lot on PMs that she couldn't in the thread, and yes its things that have been proven to be true. There was no 'drama' yesterday as someone was trying to suggest, it was someone saying their honest opinion about Gabz, and Gabz having her right to respond. I think the OP was the one to react sensitively, not Gabz. Then someone else butts in with a bitchy and uncalled for remark, and people that 'thank' bitchy comments are just putting a thumb up for meanness really. It's quite spiteful and uncalled for. I know most people are ignoring it because they feel it makes an uncomfortable atmosphere to fuel this kind of behaviour, but I feel I should stand up for her. Who cares if she isn't who she says she is, her posts are a darn sight more interesting than ones about dan having an eating disorder which make me cringe. He's already had to say twice in live shows that he's ok and it must be awkward as hell for him. The majority of this thread is funny and interesting, please resist the urge to be anonymously bitchy to each other and to join in with any bitching, it makes you no better.

Oh my, just had a very interesting email from a friend who is a producer on a well known UK radio or TV show (won't say which to protect her), and she says she's interested in running a story about Gabby. She said there was no hook before, but now she has the Primark gig it can be: who is this new collaborator with a range for teenagers, and what's all this online stuff about her being a bully? If that's the angle of the story it will be AMAZING! It will be to warn parents about Gabby and show some of her online behaviour. They already had the story from Superfame, and I gave my friend a link to the new Gabully thread which is really precise, well done everyone that put stuff in it. I think even the way she speaks to young people is enough to make a story out of it - telling people to F-off and calling them a whore - let alone the way she encourages ganging up and 'slaying' until people delete their accounts. A great ambassador for any brand - NOT! I'd love it if Gabby went on the show to defend herself too, as would be her right.

btw - is there any more stuff do you think for Gabully thread or is it a case of just going through threads to find screenshots? I don't mind doing this, but just thought I'd check in case people were sure that's all of it.

Issues 2 & 3

a. PMs sent to GG Dan and Phil thread posters:

Hi!

I'm sending the same reply to everyone who PM-ed me. I just posted a longer explanation in the thread. But here's a bit that has to stay on PM as I could get in trouble. Last month our company asked D&P's management if D&P would front a campaign as a couple, and they said they don't do things like that do. Not - "they are not a couple", but they don't show people they are a couple. It's generally known in industry they are a couple, I've mentioned that a few times in the thread, and things like this (and other snippets of info I've heard) show me that their management are aware. There's no reason they wouldn't be when everyone else knows.

The pm I sent days ago
"You've said a few times that their management see them as a "romantic couple" and I'd like to know why ? Do they just assume they are together like we all do or is there more to it ?
Also the thing about Emma not knowing shit is what you told us about before, isn't it ? The story about how she kept bitching about them when she knew nothing -like Jon Snow gnihihihi - and Phil had to tell her to sit down ?"

Yes! But don't put this in the main thread as it will be obvious it's me if channelflip read here. But I was at a networking event a couple of weeks ago and talking to the senior talent manager at CF. We were talking about how she thought Tumblr was getting more and more vicious, and I brought up gg and said it can be brutal. She said yes, but not everyone gets it in the neck: D&P's thread doesn't seem too harsh. I got inwardly really excited, and said do they read it? She said they did but she told them to stop, and that she tells all the managers to stop their talent from reading it as it's like earwigging on a conversation about you - you'll only hear something that could upset you. I really wanted to ask her how recently they read it, and if it's Dan or Phil or both. But I was trying to be professional, lol.

> > > I WILL go through my PMs of which there are many. But for now, those wondering how D&P can be open about their relationship with colleagues and management, and not their fans - this is a very normal thing in entertainment industries and happens a lot. Here's a quote from an article about Elton John in this month's Marie Claire magazine - "Despite being out in the industry, and quietly dating his manager, John Reid in the early 70's, he came out as bisexual to his fans in 1976... and came out as gay in 1988." - you might say, well it was easier in those days for Elton to be secretly gay when there was no social media, but that's not the point. He wasn't in the closet, he was quite openly gay (and went everywhere with his boyfriend) to all those he worked with and partied with in the industry - meaning fellow pop stars and performers, everyone at his record company, and for sure journalists and those in TV and radio would have known but kept it quiet. That doesn't mean his fans didn't speculate, he had no girlfriend despite being rich as hell, and he was never pictured with girls coming out of clubs. There were probably some fans completely in denial right up until he fully came out, just like some of D&P's will be. This still happens today, and there's almost a code amongst entertainers to keep things quiet - you don't know how it could impact upon your own career if you stir up shit and it comes back to you. Plus there's a sense that everyone in that industry wants to keep some privacy away from the minions, and they take refuge in partying together and guarding the secrets - and that's the way Hollywood for sure has been since film was invented.

at events). Look out for heavily staged photo 'shoots' in which the press have supposedly 'caught' a celebrity and a girl and they're getting physical. I'm looking at you, repeat offender, Gerard Butler. Also, gay male celebs will pay to have a girlfriend who is someone trying to break into the industry, that way the girl will keep quiet about it and play her part as they're getting something out of it. See Bradley Cooper and Suki Waterhouse.... annnnnd after they recently 'split' Bradley did the whole fake photo shoot with a hot girl on a street. It made me laugh to see him and Gerard doing that famous selfie shot at Wimbledon....

For actors they think their career will be in jeopardy if they come out, people won't be able to believe them playing a straight male lead - which is so sad in 2015. But there are also celebs in other entertainment industries who don't want to come out, for career-related reasons, or they just don't want to. Usually when celebs come out it's because the press have threatened to out them, so they decide with their management to come out. Mostly the press don't out people they know about because it doesn't suit their bosses who own the newspapers and TV companies - they need to keep people sweet. So instead they drop thinly veiled hints in news stories - look out for those too! There are some exceptions of course, people like the girl from Juno - coming out when they're ready. There are also anomalies like Cara Delevingne who are a-list but refuse to engage in any kind of dialogue about their sexuality, whilst openly having same-sex relationships.

I've never felt like people in the public eye have to disclose everything, it's so personal, so me telling you about D&P being open as a couple in the industry is not to out them. I think their fans are mostly aware anyway, and we can gossip behind their backs without making them feel uncomfortable or threatened about it. All their YT colleagues know, and management, and Radio1, and respect that they are not out to fans. The only people who have tried to out them are Charlie, Emma and that shitbag crew, showing how they are both unprofessional and unkind. Someone said to me on PM they thought Emma knew nothing, she knows (and I told the story of her moaning about them at their management and Phil having a word with her), and she feels offended they aren't out, as if that's exploiting the fans. This would only be the case if they were selling the idea of them being straight, and they don't do that. I do sigh at Dan talking about St Vincent being his future wife, and comments like that, but I'm not sure if that's him joking about how much he fancies her (which he of course would be allowed to do within a relationship), or him deliberately misleading his fans. It is problematic, but as we've all noticed, they are doing more and more to show they are becoming comfortable about opening up. If it took Elton 18 years of fame to come out, and he was a global star, they can take their sweet time too.

Bolded parts are what I'm mostly interested in.
My family is involved with showbiz in a much smaller (national) scale so to an extent I'm aware of the description you give of the industry, and I understand why it works that way, but what I was personally asking about was how well do we know the specifics, particularly with D&P, and if it's a rumour or a confirmed thing.

Again, since everything they do is as "best friends", being a couple isn't part of their professional life at all, and they're very careful about their privacy; I don't see why outside people would know this information. At least, not people beyond the part of their management working directly with them. And even then, do they refer to each other as boyfriends/partners/etc? In what specific way have they made their relationship so clear to Radio 1 and everyone else in their line of work?
I don't doubt you know the industry, but like with the radio contracts info, with statements that can be read as facts about D&P, I'd prefer to keep it specific if there is evidence or confirmation, and clarify if it's what would usually happen but it's an unconfirmed rumour, if that's the case.

I apologize if that sounds aggressive or negative, btw, I value your insight and posts as much as everybody else here It's just that when there is so much gossip and information easily thrown about them, if we are to take something as a reality, I'd personally prefer to have evidence of the specifics of that "truth". Thanks!

You being aggressive and negative, Margot? Nooooo.....

Um, ok. but does that mean you don't have specific, confirmed details, or...?

After mermaid and dezza's posts, I want to clarify I don't want proof to "finally out them" or anything, but I would like to know if these are conclusions based on industry standards, rumours, or if you have concrete information that confirms 100% but prefer not to disclose.

hmm. i don't wanna take the tone down, but if you are sincere and have some knowledge of how D&P are perceived by their colleagues Gabz, IMO this hints at D&P verbally confirming their relationship status to people, something the general public would not know. Even if Dan and Phil are not bothered in the slightest by untraceable, unsubstantiated posts of this nature on a gossip forum, I sort of am.

i do believe it comes down to ethics, and D&P have shown on many occasions they do not want to discuss the nature of their relationship with their fans. until that changes, i don't think anyone else has the right to take that decision out of their hands by deliberately making the pool muddier with information they know will be taken more seriously than others. this applies to you, Louise, Charlie Skies, anyone.

i don't think you have malice in your heart, but i don't think you're seeing the bigger picture. All those people you mentioned are closeted, or took their sweet time coming out on their own terms, because being anything but heterosexual and cisgendered is still something that can get you killed. and at the very least, unequal standing as a citizen. it's a serious topic and it deserves respect beyond the tabloid and glass closet.

I think if that alluded to you then it definitely alluded to me as well. Agree with you, mermaid. And one last thing I want to say, because I also agree with Gabz about not wanting to suck the fun out of the thread, is that I don't see how trying to distinguish between gossip/rumours and fact is being negative or mean.
Burden of proof is on the person making a claim.
I know I can get (maybe too) passionate about my opinions, but I hope everyone here knows I'm aware they're just opinions and interpretations, I don't ever intend to make it seem like what I say about D&P is the absolute truth. We are all equal here.
I apologize if I've come across as believing to be anything but just another gossiper.
